

EVERYTHING YOU ABSOLUTELY MUST DO IN NYC THIS WEEKEND

What a week! Fall's arrival is running hot and cold in New York City. Your commute crush was rocking an autumn sweater one day and flip-flops the next, your bartender doesn't know whether to pour a rosé or shake up a pumpkin spice something-or-other, and your friendly neighborhood subway critter still thinks it's swimsuit season.

Wake me up when September ends, amIright? Well get ready to hit the snooze button, baby, because summer ended last weekend and now September's following right along. You've only got a few days to plan your October apple picking, indoor rooftop imbibing, and pumpkin patching. But fret not. As luck would have it, we've got your weekend plans all lined up right here. All you have to do is get out there and hear the leaves crunch under your feet as you head to Oktoberfest, a drag convention, a Brooklyn block party, and a beer and bacon festival. Here is everything you must do in NYC this weekend.

Say Prost! at your local Oktoberfest

Citywide

Friday-Sunday, September 28-30

Day drink to your heart's content at an Oktoberfest to make up for the fact that we don't have the cars or space to tailgate in the city. (Why should those darn college kids get to have all the fall fun?) This weekend, celebrate an amalgamation of Germany and beer at Oktoberfest at the Watermark, Radegast Hall, and Munich on the East River.

Cost: Standard celebratory menu prices